JUNE ROSES OF BANKING.

GEORGIA OUTFIT OF BRIDES, FAIR GIRLS AND BACRELORS IN TOWN.

Looks as if There Might Be Two More Brides, Suddenly - To-day the Domestice-Fiscal Tourists Will Visit the Stock Exchange Greenwood Cemetery Afterward. Around the considerable town of New York Chief Banker W. S. Witham of Georgia led his personally conducted bank tour yesterday showing his young bankers and their fair companions all of the city that they could reasonably expect to see in one day. Mr. Witham's party is one of the most curious aggregations its make-up that ever landed in the metropolis. It consists of the cashiers of the thirty two Georgia banks of which Mr. Witham is President, the superintendents of the nine Georgia cotton mills which he owns and enough other employees of his, with the assistance of five bankers' brides and the maidens whom Mr. Witham is anxious to marry to his bachelor cashlers, to make up the total of 117 excur-"Tote fair" is the motto of the Witham banks, and that is what Combination-President Witham is doing with his tourists: For several days the party have been at go-rounds and Founder Bradley and other picturesque adjuncts of the place. Early esterday morning they shook the sand from their feet, boarded their special train and came to this city, going directly to the Gilsey House. All were swiftly assigned to rooms and were told that they had ten minutes to wash up in, after which they were to have luncheon and advance in serried ranks upon Central Park. Mr. Witham reported all well and said that there were thirteen accessions to the party who had come in late. There were still only five bridal couples, he added, although he had seemed to discern at Asbury Park indications of at-traction that pointed to an increase in the tally and although the Rev. Dr. Heidt of the party was ready and willing to perform the marriage ceremony at a moment's notice. Mr. Witham is an earnest believer in early matrimony and hopes to get rid of all his bachelor cashiers without losing a man.

Asbury Park, admiring the surf and the merry-

After luncheon the party descended upon central Park and proceeded to take in the beauties of that pseudo-rural locality. They furnished much occupation to the purveyors of compressed rides in public vehicles and drove the Jehus almost mad by their insistence upon keeping all the rigs close together. They had been explicitly warned, they said, of the perils of being lost in New York and whenever they got out of sight of Chief Banker Witham's hat they became uneasy. At the Metropolitan Museum of Art they got out and walked around and asked about the building and other things. When the party got ready to reembark two pairs were found to be missing. Everybody else immediately lifted up his or her voice and called upon those missing ones until the park rang with their names in all the tones of the human register. Several minutes later one of the couples appeared, followed shortly after by the other. The first couple explained that they had happened upon a shady dell and being much reminded of Georgia by it had wandered around several turnings until they lost their way and had to appeal to a policeman. The second pair, not thinking of anything better, said that that was what had happened to them. too. The Chief Banker observed that he supposed so and he advised the Rev. Dr. Heidt to make a note of their names for future use.

Next on the programme was a visit to Grant's Tomb, where the view of the river was conscientiously pointed out, and then they continued northward to High Bridge. Turning to the impassioned oratory of the man who barks for the Bedlow's Island boat. The Goddess of Liberty was their destination and as they passed over the waves of the bay they turned to their special programmes of the trip and read the lines which, it is said, the Chief Banker adapted from Swinburne:

The winds may blow All b party was ready and willing to perform the marriage ceremony at a moment's notice.

The winds may blow
All over Bedlow
And Liberty down in the bay.
But the atmospheric friskers
Can't blow through her whiskers,
Because she ain't built that way.

Mr. Witham modestly disclaims the credit of his poem and the other literary gems with which the programme is besprinkled, but the tourists declare that here isn't another man it Georgia who could (or perhaps they said would)

Georgia who could for perhaps they said would) write such poetry.

The visit to Liberty was the last daylight trip. Promptly on schedue time the tourists were back at the Gilsey House for dinner, after which they put on their pleasantest expressions and had a group flashlight picture taken in the big parior. Then they went in a body to the New York Theatre to see "Quo Vadis."

To-day they are to begin after a breakfast somewhat earlier than the average New York somewhat earlier than the average New York article, with a visit to the New York Life Building, followed by the ascent of the Park Row Building, from the top of which, the programme assures them, they can secure an excellent free view of the city and adjacent waters. From there the cashlers, without the girls, go to the New York Clearing House while the rest visit the Stock Exchange to stir up their spirits and Trinity Church to calm them down. At and Trinity Church to calm them down. At precisely 11:52, according to the programme, they meet at the Brooklyn Bridge, board all trolley cars in sight and proceed to what Georgia the best-known feature of Brook is in Georgia the best-known reature of Brook-lyn existence, Greenwood Cemetery. By way of a pleasing sandwich of emotions they pass from there to Coney Island—"Great old Coney, the devil's own playground"—ac-cording to the programme; and end the day with Manhattan Beach, Pain's Fireworks and the music of the band.

CONGRESSMAN BENNETT WEDS. Marie Louise Floyd-Smith Becomes His Bride in Calvary P. E. Church.

Former Congressman Charles G. Bennett of Brooklyn and Marie Louise Floyd-Smith were married yesterday in Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, Manhattan, by the Rev Cornelius L. Twing of Williamsburg. Mr Bennett, who is the Secretary of the United States Senate, served several terms in Congress from the Second Congressional district, and at different times in the last four years reports were circulated connecting his name and that f a relative of Thomas B. Reed in an engagement of marriage. The reports were always denied at Mr. Bennett's house, 1090 Gates avenue, Brooklyn. His marriage yesterday was a surprise to his friends.

TO MARK MACGAMAN'S GRAVE. Bulgarian Reads a Movement to Honor th

Bulgarian Liberator's" Memory. A movement will soon be started in this ountry and in Bulgaria to erect a monument over the grave of J. A. MacGahan, the noted war correspondent who is known as the "Bul-garian Liberator." It was the letters of Mac-Gahan to the London Times, which he repre sented in Bulgaria, detailing the Turkish atrocities, that brought about the Turko-Russian war and the liberation of Bulgaria. The correspondent died of typhus, contracted while nursing an American officer in Constan tinople in 1878 and he was buried in the Greek cemetery there, but his body was subse quently brought to this country by enactmen of the Ohio Legislature and was reinterred at

of the Ohio Legislature and was reinterred at New Lexington, Ohio, where MacGahan had lived. The funeral ceremonies were attended by many prominent Ohioans at which an address was made by Gov. Hoadly.

A short time ago Stoyan Krstoff Vatralsky, a Buigarian and a graduate of flarvard, intending to return to Bulgaria this coming fall, decided to make a pilgrimage to the grave of the man whom patriotic Bulgarians regard as the saviour of their country. He went to New Lexington, and found to his amazement that MacGahan's grave was entirely unmarked; not even a headstone showing the place of burial. Mr. Vatralsky immediately determined to undertake the erection of a monument over the grave and held a meeting in the Court House there to arouse public interest. He also communicated with the State authorities and then went, early this month to see President McKinley and bring the matter to his aftention. To his gratification, he found the President familiar with MacGahan's career and an admirer of his.

President McKinley assured Mr. Vatralsky of his warm sympathy in the movement and said that he would be glad to aid in any way. It is probable that a committee will soon be formed in Ohio to place the movement on a definite footing. Mr. Vatralsky will go abroad this fall and will undertake to raise a sum of money in Bulgarian for the monument to the "Bulgarian Liberator."

SOCIAL LEADERS DO PENANCE.

annual retreat of the Anglican order of the Protestant Episcopal Church commenced last evening at the mother house of the community, St. Gabriel's Convent, Peekskill. Many vomen who are socially prominent in this and in neighboring cities will attend the retreat, part of the soutine of which consists of four days of absolute silence. Among them will be Miss Dalsy Post, Mrs. Edward Delafield Mrs. Oliver H. P. Miss Madge Bothwell, Mrs. Albert Root, Miss Mary Titus, Miss Lucia Emery, Miss Ellen Middlebrook, Miss Gatherine King, Miss Ellen Middlebrook, Miss Grace Schuyler and Miss Annie Houghton.

On arrival at the convent they were met at the door by Mother Edith, sister superior of the order, who assigned each to the cell she will occupy during the retreat and in which she will pray and meditate between the hours of religious instruction.

During the retreat all the canonical hours will be held at the beautiful little chapel of St. Mary's. The retreat will be conducted by the Rev. Father E. A. Osborne of the Fathers of St. John the Evangelist of Boston, owing to the enforced absence of Father F. A. Laumore, late of the Cowley Fathers of England, who is the chaplain of the sisterhood. Father Langmore has just had an operation performed for appendicitis and grave fears are entertained of his recovery. Arnold, Mrs. Beekman De Peyster, Mrs. Philip

THE FLAG SHALL WAVE

And the Law Does Not Forbid Attaching Can didates' Names to It.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 26.-Mayor P. Hall Packer of Seabright has won his fight against Gen. Ferdinand P. Earle of New York. Gen. Earle took the Mayor to task because he tacked on the names of McKinley and Roose velt to an American flag and swung it across the streets of Seabright. Gen. Earle maintained that the Mayor was desecrating the flag. An act of Congress, he said, had been passed to put an end to the using of the flag for passed to put an end to the using of the flag for campaign purposes.

Mayor Packer to-day in order to satisfy himself on the question, telegraphed the following inquiry to Attorney-General John W. Griggs:

"I have swung across the street an American flag bearing the names of McKinley and Roosevelt on the bottom. Democrats ordered names off, claiming that an act of Congress forbids it. Have I violated the law?"

Attorney-General Griggs replied as follows: "Bills concerning use of American flags were introduced this and other sessions. None of them has become law."

Mayor Packer said to-night that the flag would wave until McKinley and Roosevelt were elected.

PROGRESS OF THE SUBWAY. Actual Digging of the Tunnel to Begin Down town Early in July.

The contract between the Rapid Transit Subway Company and John C. Rodgers, who is to tunnel under the Harlem River, will probably be executed this week, Mr. Rodgers said vesterday that he would begin work in about ten days at a point north of the river and dig toward the terminus of his section a and dig toward the terminus of his section at Brook avenue before beginning the tunnel under the river. He will get to that, he said, in about three months.

Downtown work on the excavation of the subway itself will begin early next month. Chief Engineer Parsons granted a permit yesterday to the Degnon-Molean Construction Company to open streets between Chambers and Great Jones streets on Centre. Elm and New Elm streets. Chambers and Great Jones streets are the limits of the second section of the subway.

TAKEN ILL ALONE IN HIS HOUSE. The Rev. Mr. Killinger Stricken With Apo plexy at Night.

TRENTON, N. J., June 26. The Rev. Emanuel B. Killinger, pastor of Chest English Lutheran Church, while alone in his house last night was taken ill and is now in a critical condition at St. Francis Hospital. He was well when he retired at 10:30 o'clock. His family are at retired at 10:30 o'clock. His family are at Selin's Grove, Pa. At midnight passersby heard groans in Mr. Killinger's house, but no attention was paid to them. The groans were also heard by J. J. Kents, a neighbor, who, at o'clock this morning, broke into the house with an axe. Every door leading toward Mr. Killinger's room was locked, as was also the bedroom door. The house was recently entered by burglars. The minister was found on the bed unconscious. The physicians think that it is a case of apopiexy.

OPEN AIR COURT AGAIN?

Mayor's Veto May Drive Queens Magistrate Into the Street Once More.

The Long Island City police court will prob ably have to resume open air sessions to-day After being put out of the Queens County Court House by Sheriff Baker the court was held on the steps of the county building for held on the steps of the county building for a few days. Then quarters were secured in St. Mary's Lyceum Building, in Fifth street, it being understood that the city would lease the place as a permanent court room. After a long delay the resolution leasing the property was passed by the Municipal Assembly, but Mayor Yan Wyck has vetoed it and the court is again without a home. It is not believed that the owner of the Lyceum will permit further occupancy, as the court has been there nearly two months without paying rent.

Bottle Baby Sea Lion Dead.

The baby sea lion which Capt. Paul Boynte was raising on a nursing bottle at Coney Island died yesterday afternoon. The sea lion was born at the island a week ago, and under the diet of condensed and fresh milk it appeared to thrive wonderfully. Yesterday, for the first time since its birth, Capt. Boynton undertook to feed it fresh fish and its death resulted a few hours after.

FLAG OF DEWEY SALUTED.

ADMIRAL GREETED BY THE SQUAD RON IN NEWPORT HARBOR.

Farquhar and His Vessels Arrive From Boston -Torpedo Boat Seat to Narragansett Pier to Fetch Dewey-Target Practice at Sea by

Warships-Officers to Attend War College. NEWPORT, R. I., June 26 .- The ships of the North Atlantic squadron under the command of Rear Admiral Farquhar are again in the waters of Narragansett Bay and they will remain here until the end of July. The trip from Boston was made in twenty-four hours, the squadron proceeding easily around Cape Cod. At daybreak this morning the flagship New York signalled for the battleships Indiana, Massachu setts and Texas to hold 'quarterly practice, while the flagship and the Kearsarge proceeded to Newport, arriving at about 9 o'clock. They came to anchor off Jamestown, three miles from Newport, as many of the officers' wives and families are summering there. As the New York came in the Admiral's flag was saluted by the gunboat Newport.

With the other ships targets were put out and all the morning passed in gunnery practice. The sea was calm and some good shots were made, showing that the American gunner was still proficient. The firing was several miles off shore yet it could be plainly heard at Newport, beginning shortly after 8 and continuing until afternoon. The ships used all their batteries, and each ship's crew allows it did the

The Massachusetts came in the harbor at 2 o'clock, followed by the Texas and Indiana, each an hour later than the other. The coming month in Narragansett Bay will be closely devoted to drill. There will be landing parties voted to drill. There will be landing parties and sham battles and boat drills, that the men may become most proficient. The officers of the ships will attend the lectures at the War College, this being the chief reason why the ships are ordered to remain here.

It was a big day in Newport from a naval standpoint as it marked the arrival here of Admiral George Dewey and the members of the Naval Policy Board. Admiral Dewey is stopping at Narragansett Pier and the fleet torpedo boat Porter was sent to bring him to Newport, it leaving here at 11:15 o'clock. The Admiral had a pleasant trip from the Pier, arriving here at 1:30.

had a pleusant trip from the Pier, arriving here at 1:30.

Admiral Dewey was President of the Board of Inspection that conducted the official trials of the Porter off Newport several years ago. In anticipation of the arrival of Admiral Dewey quite a crowd gathered at the Government landing, but he did not come to town, the Porter going direct to the training station, where the Admiral landed. On the way through the harbor the Admiral's flag was saluted by the flagship New York, the guibout Newport, the training ship Monongahela and the shore battery at the training station.

Admiral Dewey proceeded to the Naval War College, where the meeting of the Board of Naval Policy was called. The members of the board are Admiral-Dewey, President; Rear Admiral A. S. Crowninshield of the Bureau of Navigation: Capt. Charles H. Stockton, Naval War College; Capt. Robley D. Evans, Lighthouse Board; Capt. Robley D. Evans, Lighthouse Board; Capt. Charles E. The board will be in session the remainder of the week, but its deliberations will be strictly private and behind closed doors. It is a most important meeting of the board.

The Marine Guard and Apprentice Battalion were drawn upat the station to receive the Admiral and later a dress parade was held in his honor. It is said that the Admiral has declined all social invitations, of which he has had many, and will return to Narragansett Pier every night. It is understood, however, that he will participate in the Fourth of July celebration should be be asked, and an invitation will be sent him immediately.

CUT OFF STROLLERS SUPPLIES.

Temporary Misunderstanding Greatly Hampered the Club's Members. For the first time in ten days the cheerful clink of the high ball was heard last night in the rooms of the Strollers' Club at 1424 Broadway. The weather was appropriate to the restoration of privileges of which the club's deprived. The club occupies two floors over Brown's chop house. Its members draw upon its unique quarters. For that reason it came as a shock to most of the members to hear that William E. Wunderlich, who manages the restaurant for its owners, had notified the waiters that nothing was to be served to the members of the club upstairs. The way in which the announcement of this intention was made proved especially disagreeable to the members, who learned from a waiter for the first time that they were no longer to be served as

One night a group of members rang for a One might a group of members rang for a waiter as they had always been in the habit of doing. None appeared for some time and the waiter who finally answered the summons told the members that had finally were to be served to them. This came as a bolt out of a clear sky. It was not possible at that hour to get any explanation from the manager and when the members set out to seek refreshments elsewhere, they decided to have an understanding with the manager the next morning. A committee of the members immediately began negotiations with the manager and later with his employer. The legal phases of the question of the manager's action was under discussion, the members of the club had to get along without the delights of the fizzing siphon or the clink of ice. Those who wanted more substantial nourishment were also compelled to seek it outside the precincts of the club. out the delights of the fizzing siphon or the cink of rec. Those who wanted more substantial nourishment were also compelled to seek it outside the predicts of the club.

This state of seeg was not without its disadvantages to the restaurant. The Strollers is a prosperous organization and its rooms are likely to be crowded every night. It has always been a source of great profit to the restaurant, which at this season of the year has a very muon smaller patronage than usual. The negotiations between the club's officers and its legal advisers and the proprietors of the restaurant continued for several days. In the meantime, the drought at the club continued. The proprietor of the restaurant, after he heard all the facts in the case and learned what the legal features of the situation were, took sides with the club, and yesterday the privileges were restored in full. To all appearances, there is a complete establishment of peace between the manager and the club members.

Yesterday nobody concerned in the matter could be induced to discuss the terms on which the manager had surrendered to the club. All that could be learned was that after an interregaum of terrific dryness, the club was again enjoying the privileges of the bar.

"Everything is peaceful," said a Stroller last night, "and it is not likely that there will be any further interruption in the future. No reasons for the sudden action of the manager have been discussed. The conference between the lawyers and the proprietor of the restaurant were devoted entirely to securing a prompt restoration of the privileges insured by the terms on which the club rents its two floors here. There seems to have been no particular reason for the action of the manager in suddenly declining to serve the members. Possibly such a thing would never have occurred to him if the club had seen its way to electing him a member. But that was out of the question, you know. The membership limit has about been reached already. But we anticipate no more trouble in the future.

Mr. Warren avers that his father, who died a few years ago, left his entire estate, share and share alike, to his two daughiers, but that there was an explicit understanding and stipulation between the members of the family that upon the death of the unmarried sister her share should go to the brother. Mr. Warren alleges that his dead sister's mind was prejudiced against him by Mrs. Rowland.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

A Wall Street man who has been making up a list of old unsettled estates in this city said yesterday that until he began the work he had no adequate appreciation of the great wealth of this city. "For instance," he said. "I discovered an estate last week which amounts to a good deal more than a million and when the man who owned it died suddenly several years ago no one knew him outside of a little circle of family friends. He was born in New York of family friends. He was born in New York and lived here all his life with real estate valued at more than a million dollars in his name and yet he never figured in any of the lists of wealthy men. Of course the Fayerweather estate was a striking example of unexpected wealth, but there are many others which foot up in the millions and of which the public knows nothing. There is no way to get a directory of these valuable estates. Many of the trust companies have lists of them, which they guard closely. My information has been gained by following up all sorts of clues and old records and if I decided to publish it, after it had served my purpose, it would make interesting reading."

A club that has resisted all temptations to move uptown and recently went so decidedly against the tendency of the times in club life as to take a house several blocks further downtown than the one it had occupied for some years has received several recruits to its membership for rather an unusual reason. It took the quarters occupied for a long time by another club, which moved to an elaborate and magnificlub, which moved to an elaborate and magnificent new house much further northward. The new building is one of the finest in the city and is a striking example of the present splendor of the modern New York clubs. But there were certain members to whom this characteristic did not appeal so strongly as the less luxurious surroundings and accessibility of their former club home. So they were loath to give up their accustomed quarters. Their difficulty was solved by joining the club which came to occupy their former quarters. This was a solution not possible to every member, but they were able to afford the luxury of another club.

ago the most extravagant stories of the success of a young soprano were cabled to New York. She was said to be enraged for a noted German opera house under remarkable conditions. It now appears that she is not connected with that theatre. These rumors are always connected with singers whose reported foreign successes are a matter of great surprise to persona here familiar with their talents. Miss Fremdstadt has been for several years at the operatival one year. She went to Germany to begin her musical studies abroad under the direction of Mme. Lehmann, who took a great interest in her at that time and during the carlier stage of her career. She has never before been heard here in English opera, and it is the engagement of such singers as Miss Fremdstadt that is likely to give the new enterprise a really national character.

The accounts of summer resort gayeties that appear in some of the Sunday newspapers are even a greater tax now on ingenuity and invention than they are in the height of the season, when there really may be something to be written about from these places. To see pictures of women in bathing costume, of mountain climbers and of persons engaged in other agreeable sports at this time does not awake agreeable sports at this time does not awake the envy of even the most overworked city resident. It is only necessary to turn to the advertisements to see that the hotels at most of these places have not yet been opened and that such pleasures will not begin in reality for nearly a month. One amusing instance of this kind occurred last week, when the delights of a resort on the Jersey coast were imaginatively described in pencil and writing. As a matter of fact, none of the three hotels at this place was yet opened, the bathing house is not to be ready for ten day yet and the place is nothing ready for ten days yet and the place is nothing more than rather a chilly stretch of windy sand, but according to the newspaper which pictured its beauties so prophetically, it was already crowded with men and women enjoying themselves in a way that will be possible only on Aug. 1.

Three large millinery shops in this city, each run under a different firm name are owned by one man and his example is being followed by other men interested in the same business. It is a mystery to the outsider why a man should assume different names for his different stores. The names have no commercial value other than that which they may acquire under his management. In other kinds of business, if a man is successful, his name is a trademark. Our successful man milliher began business ago. He succeeded and he has since invested his surplus, every two or three years, in establishing a new millinery shop in a fashionable neighborhood. Not one of these new shops bears this man's name. Possibly one object for such a variety of names is to lend the buyer who goes from shop to shop to think that she is learning the prices of rivals. It might spoil her fun if she knew that the shops were owned by the same person. The names have no commercial value other by the same person the ground that in many cases the company had received more credit checks for wagon loads of snow removed than it was entitled to under its contract with the city.

Comptroller Coler says that in many cases two credit tickets had been given for each load and in some cases as many as five tickets had been received where only on e was called for. At the time the tickets were given there were many excuses offered for the extra payment. One was that the snow had frozen into ice and that the difficulty in removing it made the job worth more than the contract price. Another was that the work had been done so expeditiously and so cleanly that a bonus was no more than right. When the claim of the company was certified to and presented to Comptroller Coler, he said that he would not pay it.

The company will have to sue for it," said he: "all I will pay is what is coming to the company under the terms of the contract."

ing nature can realize what an ordeal for him a public appearance must be. His humor, however, is likely to make itself as effective as ever, for the McConneil jokes have already stood the test of professional use with complete success. Many a speech in current farce and burlesque has been bright with his peculiar wit. He used to have an office at Thirty-eighth street and Broadway, and in those days most of the wit that travelled up and down the Riaito had its origin in his office. He was as one time the silent partner in a firm of burlesque writers who turned out the cleverest specimens of such work that the New York stage has ever witnessed. If Mr. McConneil proves as entertaining as his friends expect him to be, his sojourn in vaudeville will probably be extended beyond the limits of his summer vacation.

summer season. The Jersey coast was never in greater favor than this year and not a cottage directly on the ocean is said to be un-rented from Highland Beach down to Spring Lake. This condition is said to exist for the first time in years and was unexpected to a first time in years and was unexpected to a certain extent. In a summer hotel near the city, the number of applications for rooms last Saturday exceeded by more than a hundred the available supply. This establishment always happens to have its largest patronage during June and September, but this year it has enjoyed unprecedented prosperity. There is not a summer hotel proprietor about the city who does not look forward to a successful year. And these expectations are, in the majority of cases, founded on such substantial grounds as the demand for accommodations already received.

A NEW BOOK ABOUT CHINA

With Timely Chapters on Peking, Tientsin, the Decadence of the Manchus, the Dowager Empress, etc.

The Long=Lived Empire

By ELIZA RUHAMAH SCIDMORE Author of "Jinrikisha Days in Japan" and "Java: The Garden of the East" 800, 466 pages, with full index, $2.50.

The attention of the civilized world is directed to China, and fortunately The Century Co. has ready a book which will supply the demand for up-to-date information on the subject. Miss Scidmore's "China: The Long-Lived Empire" has not been hastily put together to take advantage of a sudden demand, but was already in type when the doings of the "Boxers" became the subject of daily cablegrams. Miss Scidmore has visited China seven times within the past fifteen years. She is thoroughly conversant with the subject, knows the work of the foreign missions, and the inside machinery of Chinese politics. The book is very fully illustrated from photographs and drawings, and the frontispiece is a portrait of the Dowager Empress from a painting on silk. Sold everywhere. Published by sen because William K. Baker, one of the jurors, shook hands with the plaintiff's husband. When the trial opened on Monday Congressman William D. Daly, who represented the defendant, asked the jurors if any was acquainted with either the plaintiff or defendant, and all answered in the negative. Yesterday morning, while Mr. Mason and his wife were talking with their counsel, James F. Minturn, just before the orening of court Mr. Baker stepped up to the group, saluted Mrs. Mason and shook hands with her husband. Congressman Daly called the attention of the Court to the occurrence. Baker acknowledged that he was well acquainted with the Masons. Mrs. Mason's suit was for $10,000 dismages. While she was a tenant in one of Mrs. Thuesen's flats her clothing caught fire from a lamp which had been placed on the stairs and she was severely burned.
